

Cornish style houses get Conquest treatment

An ongoing project to refurbish Cornish style houses in south Wales feature Celuform low maintenance fascia and soffit.

Ninety dwellings at Gorseinon, near Swansea have had ageing timber rooflines replaced with Celuform PVC-UE products.

Den Thomas, Area Maintenance Manager for the City and County of Swansea Housing Department said, "The refurbishment of these properties is part of a major scheme in the area. The finished houses and flats look great and tenants have been very pleased and complimentary."

"Much of the timber was beyond repair and the local authority was looking for a low maintenance alternative that would all but eliminate repair costs," said Gareth Roderick, Celuform's local sales manager.

By using Celuform cellular plastic, the local authority's target to minimise ongoing maintenance has been satisfied. Timber has to be treated and painted on a regular basis, whereas Celuform products have a 15-year guarantee against rot, fading or yellowing.

The work at Gorseinon has been undertaken by Jistcourt Contractors of Port Talbot.

New Products

Fastrack CAD

Estimating

Case Study - Swansea Housing Department